

PLANNING NEW CONSTRUCTION? FIRST VISIT THE FIRST STEP CENTER

1. Real Property: Please have a clear idea of the location of the subject property. This step ensures that future determination of setbacks, easements and right-of-way will be correct and will provide information. Included in this process should be the legal description and tax parcel numbers.
2. Land Use and Zoning: Having the basic property information in hand, contact the City's Planning Division at 334-5023 to obtain land use classification and the zoning of your property. For the respective land use and zoning district, obtain a copy of the list of permitted uses within the zoning district. When you call in regards to and intended use of the property be specific. Although you will be provided with developments standards at a later date, you may ask the planning official to for information and details pertaining to development standards. Generally, the planning official will refer you to the First Step Center, depending on your situation. You may be provided with applications and instructions on how to proceed with your development.

For more information contact: Lawrence Calderon in Planning at 352-334-5023.

WHAT IS THE FIRST STEP CENTER?

The First Step Center is the City of Gainesville's permit and development assistance center. The center provides a convenient, one-stop location where business owners, developers, and other interested persons receive development and permitting information from several city departments at one time. There is no fee for a First Step appointment.

By meeting with the First Step staff, you can find out about the regulations that apply to your development, issues of concern you should address, and whether your development is consistent with the City's comprehensive plan.

Upon contacting the First Step Center you will be asked for information about your property and proposed project. If your property is properly zoned and the use you propose is allowed on your parcel, a First Step appointment will be scheduled.

If it is determined that your property is not properly zoned, you will be referred to the City's planning division to discuss appropriate land use, zoning categories and locations. The Current Planning Division can be reached at (352) 334-5023.

WHAT SHOULD I BRING TO A FIRST STEP MEETING?

To get the most out of your First Step meeting bring as much information as possible about your project such as a survey, set of plans of the existing site or a sketch of your proposed development.

WHAT INFORMATION IS PROVIDED?

During your First Step meeting, City staff from the Building Inspection Department, Planning Division, Public Works Department, Gainesville Regional Utilities and Fire Protection will provide you preliminary information to help you get your project started.

During the meeting, you can learn about building permits, the availability of utilities at your site, how to submit development plans for review, sign regulations, parking requirements, transportation issues, comprehensive plan issues, fire safety requirements, zoning regulations such as setbacks and allowable activities within zoning districts, stormwater management, and environmental protection requirements. By meeting with all the applicable city representatives at one time the petitioner saves time and avoids having duplicative meetings with various individuals.

DOES FIRST STEP REPLACE THE SITE PLAN REVIEW PROCESS?

Your First Step meeting is not intended to replace the formal development review process required for most construction projects.

After attending First Step, you still have to submit your completed site and development plans and work with City staff and the appropriate review board to address issues of concern and obtain approval for your project. However, property owners have found First Step beneficial in determining site constraints and zoning requirements prior to making costly expenditures in real estate and professional services for projects that may not be feasible.

HOW DO I OBTAIN FINAL APPROVAL OF MY PROJECT?

Homeowners who are building, remodeling, or expanding a home or duplex do not need to go through the normal site plan review process. Rather, homeowners can submit their completed building plans to the Building Inspection Department and apply for the necessary permits directly. The Building Inspections Department conducts a basic review for compliance with zoning development standards.

All other projects require a formal development plan review, whether they include new construction, changes to existing structures, or amendments to an approved development plan. The amount of review required is based on the type and intensity of the proposed development. The review of the development plan will fall into one of the following categories, based upon these thresholds:

▪ Rapid Review:

Resurfacing of existing impervious areas that does not include additional parking spaces; developments under 500 square feet which do not require stormwater; certain field changes to active development. This is an administrative review done in coordination with a building permit.

▪ Minor Development Review:

Up to 2,500 square feet of development area; from 3 to 5 additional dwelling units; up to 15 new parking spaces; pole barns in agriculture, industrial and warehouse districts up to 2,500 square feet. This is an administrative development plan review.

▪ Minor II Development Review:

Between 2,500 and 10,000 square feet of development area; from 6 to 25 additional dwelling units. This is a development plan review that is voted on by the Development Review Board.

▪ Intermediate Development Review:

Between 10,000 and 50,000 square feet of development area; from 26 to 99 additional dwelling units; 16 to 100 new parking spaces. This is a development plan review that is voted on by the Development Review Board.

▪ Major Development Review:

Greater than 50,000 square feet of development area; 100 or more new dwelling units; greater than 100 parking spaces. This is a development plan review that is voted on by the Development Review Board.

NOTE:

Time estimates given for plan reviews are for well-prepared, completed plans. Actual times will increase if plans are incomplete or the conditions given by City staff or the Development Review Board or Plan Board are not properly addressed.

In addition, developers should add the time required to obtain approvals from other organizations such as the water management district, the Department of Transportation, the Health Department and any others that may apply to the project.
